RESCUE
THOUSANDS.
PROTECT MILLIONS.
PROVE THAT JUSTICE
FOR THE POOR IS POSSIBLE.

Murugan and Selvi were once enslaved in a tree-cutting facility, until IJM and local authorities rescued them. Today, they are thriving in our aftercare programme and running their own charcoal business.

Dear friends,

As I look back at 2015—a year of so many incredible milestones for IJM—I keep returning to four young women I met in the Dominican Republic just a few months ago.

These girls were recently rescued from unspeakable abuse at the hands of local pimps and traffickers. But, despite their experience, they are not broken or bitter. They are healing, encouraging one another, and eagerly learning to dream again. With hard work and hope, these brave survivors are already overcoming the darkness.

Their bold hope reminds me so much of the larger story we experienced at IJM this year.

As we've taken on the urgent and unspeakable injustices of the world—work others often call impossible—we've actually seen significant change happening. And just like these young women, our progress inspires new dreams of what may be possible in the next era.

“ It once seemed impossible to rescue even one child from brutal violence; now we see thousands freed each year.

It once seemed impossible for broken justice systems in places like Cambodia to ever be fixed; now our teams witness miraculous transformation year over year. We're excited for how this progress will inform our work and inspire other countries just beginning the fight.

Your support has made these impossible dreams possible. We have so much to celebrate in 2015 and so much to anticipate for the years ahead. Thank you for standing with us to protect the poor from violence this year.

Gratefully,

GARY A. HAUGEN
IJM Founder & CEO

AFRICA

FIRST RESCUE IN GHANA FREES 10 BOYS FROM BRUTAL SLAVERY

Backed by faithful IJM supporters, our newest field office in Ghana set out on their first-ever rescue operation in March 2015, bringing 10 young boys to freedom. These boys were among thousands enslaved in the dangerous fishing industry on Lake Volta. They faced daily beatings as they worked, and few had ever been to school or eaten a nutritious meal.

Our team worked closely with anti-trafficking police and social workers to arrest the slave owners and bring these 10 children to a safe aftercare home where they began healing. The boys arrived malnourished, exhausted and barely clothed—but now they are receiving good food, rest, play and education. Today we’re locating their families and supporting their parents with counselling and education, so we can be confident the boys won’t be trafficked again.

LATIN AMERICA

“SUPER DAY OF JOY” MARKS IJM’S 10 YEARS IN GUATEMALA

In October of 2015, we celebrated a decade of groundbreaking work protecting children from sexual violence in Guatemala.

Our team frequently holds “Day of Joy” events for children who bravely choose to testify in court. This year’s special “Super Day of Joy” reunited boys and girls we’ve helped throughout all 10 years.

Their families enjoyed games, movies and a comedy show, as well as encouragement that Guatemala is safer because of their courage.

“In every child we see God’s love made real. It is incredible to see girls and boys smiling, to see them overcome such deep suffering.”

INDIAN OFFICIALS FREE 333 IN GAME-CHANGING RESCUE

In 2015, police near Chennai initiated a massive rescue with IJM’s help and brought 333 children, women and men to freedom - our second-largest operation ever.

Families in this brick factory lived in tiny, thatched-roof huts and were each forced to make 2,000 bricks a week. They ate barely enough rice to survive. After the rescue, the IJM-trained officials provided medical care and meals, and then helped each family return to their home village. We will continue supporting them in a two-year aftercare programme.

“When we started working here a decade ago, officials either hadn’t heard of bonded labour or denied that it existed in their state. This rescue operation is a game-changer.”

SAJU MATHEW IJM Vice President of Operations for South Asia

SHEDDING NEW LIGHT ON SLAVERY

This year, IJM teams published first-of-their-kind studies of forced labour slavery in India and of sex trafficking in the Dominican Republic, which will provide crucial insight for the fight ahead. Capturing a hidden crime like slavery presents a serious challenge, but cutting-edge methodologies helped us gain a deeper understanding of the scale and nature of these crimes. Strong data like this will better position us to help authorities end slavery for good.

LANDMARK SENTENCE PROTECTS UGANDAN GRANDMOTHER

At 70 years old, Juliana was no match for the violent young man trying to steal her home and small grove of banana trees. She relied on her land to support her ten grandchildren, but lived in constant terror after this man attacked her with a machete to overtake it.

"I used to cry all the time. Now I don't fear... I can finally sleep peacefully again!"

JULIANA IJM Client

Our Uganda team relentlessly defended Juliana and worked with police to arrest her attacker and put him on trial.

In April, a judge convicted this man to six years in prison - a rare judgment and the strongest sentence ever in our land grabbing cases. Today, Juliana and her grandchildren are safe again and rebuilding their lives in peace.

SOUTHEAST ASIA

RESCUING CHILDREN FROM DISTURBING ONLINE ABUSE

As crimes against impoverished children evolve, so does the expertise of IJM teams working to defend them. The end of 2015 saw a conviction in the Philippines in IJM's first case of online child sexual exploitation. IJM's work continues to demonstrate that the Philippines remains a dangerous place for any type of trafficking. But this verdict goes one step further, setting a precedent as IJM starts to target this new but growing type of abuse.

"IJM is ready and able to support international law enforcement to stop the abuse and hold [abusers] accountable."

IJM President Gary Haugen took the prestigious 2015 TED stage to illuminate a hidden plague of violence devastating the poor, and to inspire great minds to take action on their behalf. In a series of powerful stories, he explained how violence is as much a part of everyday life for the poor as hunger, disease or homelessness.

IJM PETITIONS FOR NEW SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

In June, IJM UK Chief Executive, Terry Tennens, delivered over 8,000 signatures from supporters in the UK, calling for the UN to include justice measures in their new Sustainable Development Goals.

Public justice systems that reliably and professionally protect the vulnerable - especially women and children - from violence and exploitation are an essential component of sustainable development. Despite this, the Millennium Development Goals failed to include any reference to justice, rule of law, or anti-violence measures.

In September, 17 new Sustainable Development Goals were adopted with three primary aims: End extreme poverty; fight inequality and injustice; and fix climate change. Goal 16 in particular focuses on the provision of access to justice for all.

“This is a milestone for international development. For the first time, the issue of everyday violence against the poor is being recognised as equally critical as education, health and clean water in efforts to eradicate poverty.”
- Terry Tennens, IJM UK Chief Executive

FROM OUR CLIENT

A LETTER OF Thanks

Generous donors sent IJM to rescue Charito* from sex trafficking in 2007. In 2015, eight years later, she sent us a letter of thanks, and we couldn't wait to share it with you.

Dear IJM Family,

It was November 2007 when you came and saved me from the people who took advantage of my vulnerability. What I had at that time was only my shattered dreams, wounded self and very low self-esteem. I was so sensitive, packed with a heart full of hatred and revenge. I had a desire to change my life, but I was so afraid.

Chasing my dreams was not easy. Some people did not support me, and some laughed and said I can't achieve my dreams. Through the help of my IJM social worker and staff in the shelter, these criticisms made me even stronger. I was able to finish my secondary education. Luckily, I got the IJM scholarship for my college. I've learned to prioritise my goals and dreams, and I am now starting a new chapter of my life.

In August 2015, I passed the Social Work board examination. Thank you so much: I am now a licensed Social Worker. I am so happy helping girls who have experienced traumas and hardships like me. I can return the help that IJM gave me.

To the IJM social workers and staff: thank you for making me realise that I'm worth everything in this world. Thank you for never giving up on me. You helped me climb high when the whole world said I can't do it.

Without each of you, I'd be nowhere near the person I am today - and the person I'm still working on becoming. There aren't enough words to express my appreciation, but I think this is a good start. I owe you one.

Thank you,

TRANSFORMATION IN CAMBODIA

Abusers once trumpeted Cambodia as the place to purchase young children for sex with no fear of the law. Very young girls were sold in the open, and the local justice system was simply too broken to respond.

Over the last 15 years, we've partnered with officials like General Pol Phie They (pictured) and other anti-trafficking leaders to strengthen the justice system and end the abuse. Together, we've witnessed remarkable change: Our 2015 study saw the prevalence of children in the sex industry in three major cities drop from an estimated 15-30% to just 2.2%. This fierce effort proves to the world that justice for the poor is possible.

“We have a heart to protect the country by ensuring rights and freedom for all citizens, and by ensuring citizens are free from trafficking, infliction and suppression... Perpetrators may keep coming up with more trickery, but what we have is our will and our responsibility to fight against them.”

—GENERAL POL PHIE THEY

Director of Cambodia's Anti-Human Trafficking and Juvenile Protection Police
